LIVE TRAINING IN DIBBLE'S EVIDENCE-BASE PROGRAM LOVE NOTES

Join us in Columbus, OH for a cost-effective, hands-on training in our most popular curricula. Especially good for individuals or small staff teams.

Love Notes was created to help teens and young adults learn, often for the first time, how to make wise choices about relationships, dating, partners, sex, and more. This program takes an innovative approach to these topics by integrating relationship skills with powerful learning strategies.

THE LATEST

Girls less likely to get pregnant if a friend has a baby

Girls whose friends have experienced teen childbirth are less likely to get pregnant themselves, a new study suggests. The researchers compared two groups of teen girls: those with a similarly-aged friend who'd given birth, and those with a friend who'd had an early miscarriage. They wanted to see whether these events affected the girls' choices in having sex, getting pregnant, having a child, and getting married as teens — or their choices regarding school, marriage and family as adults.

Lisa Fontes's ex-boyfriend never punched her, or pulled her hair. But he hacked into her computer, and installed a spy cam in her bedroom, and subtly distanced her from her friends and family.

Still, she didn't think she was a victim of domestic abuse. "I had no way to understand this relationship except it was a bad relationship," said Dr. Fontes, 54, who teaches adult education at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

It was only after doing research on emotional abuse that she discovered a name for what she experienced: Coercive control, a pattern of behavior that some people — usually but not always men — employ to dominate their partners.

TOOLS YOU CAN USE

7 ways to teach your teen how to disagree appropriately

Teens love to argue their viewpoints. In fact, if you're the parent of a teen, you often may feel like you're living with a pricey underage attorney or a national debate champ!

Meaningless arguments are a bummer for everyone, and there are plenty of issues that shouldn't be up for negotiation.

Teach your teen to disagree appropriately! This powerful skill gives kids the opportunity to be heard, and helps them think before speaking while presenting their views in a calm, reasonable manner.

SECOND WEDNESDAY WEBINAR

August 17

Robust Relationship Skills Education — A Strength-Based Approach to Teen Dating Violence Prevention

Working directly with teens to robustly build healthy relationship skills gives us a unique and positive approach for primary and secondary dating violence prevention with males and females. Developing adolescents' knowledge about and skills for their romantic lives is an especially effective approach to deescalating conflict, developing a personal sense of responsibility, and staying safe.

This webinar will:

- Review the research on comprehensive relationship education as it relates to teen dating violence;
- Explore how relationship education positively impacts other outcomes for adolescents, and
- Learn strategies that participants can use to bring evidence-based relationship skills to their schools and communities.

Presenter: Kay Reed, President and Executive Director, The Dibble Institute

Who should attend: Youth-serving program staff and administrators in the fields of dating and domestic violence, healthy relationships, pregnancy prevention, youth development, and others that work with teens and young adults

When: Wednesday, August 17, 2016, 4:00 pm Eastern/1:00 pm Pacific

Duration: 60 minutes
